RED CROSS MEETING

A meeting of the Women's executive committee of the Red Cross Society was held on Monday night at the home of Mrs. D. V. Gilmour with the chairman Mrs. J. S. Madill presiding. Members of the Stirling and Welling Societies who wish to amalgamate with our society met with the committee and it was decided for Welling to become members of our society and Stirling to become an auxiliary of the same and for those desiring sewing or knitting from these towns to receive it from our work rooms.

The committee is in need of more Machines for the work rooms so that more work may be done in the rooms, so that if anyone has a machine they could loan us even for a week or two we would appreciate it and if they will get in touch with Lee Brewerton or Phone 20 arrangements will be made to call for it.

We have had good response with our knitted articles and have had some splendid work done having completed for our second shipment to Calgary 81 pieces, but the sewing has not been responded to as well so we hope for more co-operation in this in the future. Supervisors will be present at the rooms to help anyone desiring help with the sewing at all times, the rooms being open on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 2 to 5:30 p.m. and arrangements can be made for any group who wish to meet any other afternoon of the week, if they will notify the committee in advance.

Committees were formed for a tea for the Red Cross which will be held at the home of Mrs. J. S. Madill on June 19th and the Red Cross hopes for your support at this tea.

WEDDING BELLS

THOMPSON — PARISI

On Monday noon at his residence, Bishop J. O. Hicken of the Raymond 1st Ward united in marriage Andrew Wm. Thompson of Raymond, and Miss Emily Marguerita Parisi of Edmonton. The happy young couple will make their home in Raymond, and with their many friends we extend best wishes for a long and happy married life.

News from the war front Tuesday and Wednesday was more cheering as far as the Allies were concerned, although the situation was still decidedly grave. British and French troops after heavy fighting in counter-attacks had driven the Nazis hordes from some of the recently captured towns and positions, and halted for the time being the German drive to the Channel ports, resulting in more optimism throughout the Allied countries.

The change in the personnel of the commanders, General Weygand being called back to replace General Gamelin as Generalissimo of the Allied forces, seemed to have marked the turning point in Allied activity and fired the men with determination to win at any cost.

For five dark days the Nazi hordes led by tanks and motorcycle squads and assisted from the air by bombing and fighter planes, pressed steadily on, making the Allies fall back, and for some time it looked like their capturing of Channel ports as a base for raids on England and thereby cutting off the British army in France from supplies and reinforcements seemed only a matter of hours. The world waited with bated breath. Then the tide turned to some extent. Severe counter-attacks were commenced, advance units of tanks and motorcyclists were captured, heavy bombing by the R.A.F. of troop movements, trains, rail way yards and supply depots resulted in hampering any definite and concrete movements and spread consternation amongst Nazi troops. Even the weather man took a hand when a steady rain for more than a day soaked up fields and roads and made movements with the heavy lumbering tanks impossible, and gave the Allies a chance to dig in and organize better for further attacks which are bound to come.

Like the blitzkrieg in Poland, refugee trains, refugees on the roads, and everyone and every thing else where they felt they could accomplish anything in the way of weakening the resistance of their enemies. R.A.F. bombers on the other hand have stayed with military objectives and troops in their bombings, and are reported to have even desisted from the bombing of transport lorries, because of their being mixed with other vehicles which they could not identify and the danger to refugees and other civilians.

In the air fighting to date Britain has showed a marked superiority over the Nazi airmen both in accuracy in bombing, and also in dogfights between the planes. Reported as a 3 to 1 ratio of loss of R.A.F. planes compared with Nazi planes, and the accuracy of bombs about the same, and even discounting this ratio as some what exaggerated, it still gives the Allies a decided advantage which if maintained will mean victory in the air at last.

Meanwhile at home, Canada is training her men in aerial as well as ground work, preparing her financial program, and moving ahead steadily toward accomplishment of her share in the struggle for human liberty and freedom.

Beet thinning is under way now in Barnwell area, and some fields locally are ready to thin.

VICTORY, BUT WHAT A PRICE?

There seems no question on the part of the Allies, at home and abroad, but what victory will ultimately come to Allied forces. It must come, but the price is going to be high and there will be billions of dollars wasted in supplies and munitions, hundreds of thousands slain on the battlefields of the world, and other countless numbers left widows and fatherless as a result of the conflict, and for what? Unless the dominating spirit of Nazism and its allied isms is wiped out entirely, and its fostering made a crime punishable by death, after the present conflict, it will only be a matter of years until the same thing will recur again. Since the dawn of history the war between oppression and freedom of thought and action has gone on. One could name many men in history who in their distorted mind have set it their duty to rule the world, and in proportion to their time, the results have been equal. A lot of dead and wounded soldiers, broken homes and bankrupt nations, and defeat for the aggressor. Such was the case with Napoleon, such was the case with Kaiser Wilhelm at the end of the last World War, and such will be the case with the Nazi leader at the end of the present conflict. Why are the Allies so sure of this? Because they are basically a Christian and religious people, and because throughout the ages, since the dawn of history, final victory has always been on the side of right, and so it will be this time. The first fight, if it can be called such, was on the question of freedom to choose, and that happened before this earth was formed. At that time the controversy was so marked that one-third followed the leader who advocated force. These two elements have continued, and while the peace makers love quiet and harmony and delight in spending their effort at beautification of the world, and despoiling. Why? It seems there is always an element that delights in murder, destruction inborn in some people.

And so in the present conflict While we are living in the greatest of all ages, where the inventive mind of man, through the inspiration of the Spark Divine, has given us the greatest inventions of all times for our pleasure and enjoyment and just at a time when the progress of the world spiritually and temporally, could have outstripped any previous age, the demons of death and destruction come in and turn these inventions and advancement into engines of war and destruction and not only set back the clock of progress but also add to the suffering and misery of the world in a measure hitherto even dreamed of in the worst of nightmares.

What will be gained by the despoilers, even if they won? More land. What a poor excuse to justify such wholesale slaughter. There is plenty of land, we have never heard of immigration to foreign countries having been stopped. No this is not the reason. It is just the idea of power and might. And while the Allies fight to quell this desire, the nations suffer, and will suffer long after for the desire of one man to gratify his lust for power. What a price the world must pay to maintain her liberty and freedom, and yet, with Patrick Henry all will say "Give me liberty or give me death." We will have liberty, through victory, but, one hates to contemplate the price of this victory in view of the wholesale slaughter of the past ten days in the fighting in Belgium and northern France in comparison with other wars the toll of dead per day was insignificant and the greatest battle of all time will be waged and is being waged on the battle ground of the last war. Let us hope, that after this, the peace and security of the peace loving nations of the world may be made certain, although judged in the mirror of the past, this seems next to impossible.

WANT COMPULSORY DRIVERS' TESTS

Demands for compulsory examinations of applicants for drivers' licenses in Alberta are being made in some parts of the province. The suggestion already has been advanced in Calgary and is favored in Edmonton and elsewhere.

When directors of the Alberta Motor Association hold their regular meeting next month, it is expected that this will be one of the questions to receive consideration.

Promoters of the new proposed regulation point out that compulsory examinations are held in British Columbia and other parts of the country. It is claimed that Alberta should get in step with other provinces.

In British Columbia the license fee is $1 while an addition at dollar is charged for a driver's examination.

Provincial government officials do not appear disposed to make a change from the present system, however, pointing out that all possible care is exercised now in issuing drivers' licenses.

Also, it is pointed out that the great percentage of motor accidents involve experienced drivers and not those who have been handling cars for merely a short period. In most cases accidents were due to reckless or careless driving on the part of old hands at driving, it is claimed.

NEWS NOTES

Purchasing agents of the French government have been in Alberta the past two weeks purchasing remounts for the French mounted units.

The Anglo-French purchasing agency has ordered $50,000,000 worth of planes from the Douglas Aircraft Co., of Santa Monica, Cal., according to reports.

25c. war stamps are to be sold to assist in financing the present war and will be for sale in post offices, banks and chain stores that have nation wide branches. A similar stamp was sold during the last war.

The 21 South American Republics on Monday protested Germany's invasion of Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg, and termed it "unjustifiable and cruel."

According to reports released this week, 47 candidates in the last provincial election lost their deposits of $100 each, and these included five members of the last legislature.

School students may rejoice in one thing. In another five weeks school will be out and the two months holiday commencing. Montana schools, we are told, dismissed some of their students May 17th.

WEEKLY LETTER FIELD BEANS

Farmers, who are interested in growing field beans are, no doubt planning to seed them if they have not already done so.

Extensive tests have been conducted with field beans at the Lethbridge Experimental Station for at least 15 years. Many different varieties have been conducted to determine the best date, rate and method of seeding, and the effect of commercial fertilizer. Other problems encountered in the growing of this crop have been dealt with as well and from our experience obtained over a period of years, we consider that beans are a crop worthy of more consideration than they have been given in the past.

The shortness of our growing season must always be kept in mind as probably the greatest obstacle to be contended with. We must, therefore, make every effort possible to have our bean crops harvested about the first of September. The weather records at the Station show that over a period of past twenty years, the average date of the first fall frost has been September 15 and of the first killing frost which is four degrees or more, September 26.

For several years past we have seeded beans at intervals of ten days apart commencing as early as possible in the spring and extending till June 20. Results obtained from this experiment indicate that nothing is gained by seeding beans earlier than May 10, as plots seeded on that date and all plots seeded previous to it have ripened at the same time and given approximately the same yields.

Plots seeded on May 20 have ripened practically as early as those seeded on May 10, and for the last four seasons, those seeded on June 1 have also ripened successfully before killing frosts arrived. Every effort however, should be made to have the seeding of beans completed by May 20th.

The choice of variety is a most important factor in bean growing. It is important to choose a variety of a type which meets the market requirements and which is early enough to be depended upon. Of the numerous varieties tested at the Station, the Burbank variety which is a small white one, is the one which has proved most satisfactory. This variety should be seeded at about sixty pounds per acre when the rows are spaced twenty-two inches apart.

We find that beans can be grown much more economically now than they were grown a few years ago. Sugar beet drills and cultivators work excellent for drilling and cultivating beans and bean harvesters can be easily constructed by procuring special knives from implement companies and attaching these to an ordinary two-row corn cultivator or to a beet lifter. One man and team should be able to pull seven acres of beans in a day without difficulty with a machine of this kind. By making a few adjustments and adding a few special pulleys ordinary threshing machines can be used to thresh beans.

As time goes along, we are likely to see more interest being shown in this district, particularly as a specialized crop for irrigated land.

Raymond was well represented at the Barbecue and Aaronic Priesthood anniversary program at Magrath on Saturday. Misunderstanding of the exact nature of the meeting kept many people away who would otherwise have been present.

CHAPTER VIII

Janet was glad when the music ended, glad when Priscilla came skating across the room to assert her prior claim to the visiting celebrity, glad when everybody crowded around Tony Ryan so that Janet was edged to the extreme rim of the group and finally extricated from it entirely by Ted Hughes with whom she had the next dance.

The last dance of the evening was the only one in which no cuts were allowed. Every one was supposed to dance it with his escort, but Janet had not seen Jim for an hour. She had a notion he was lurking out side with a cigarette. However she made a circuit of the veranda without locating him. She was perched on the porch railing staring somberly at the setting moon, when Tony Ryan again came up behind her.

"Want to dance?" he asked.

"No," said Janet without turning her head.

There was an interval of silence which Janet found trying in the end it was she who broke what had begun to seem a contest between their wills.

"It must be nice to return to the old home town in the role of conquering hero," she remarked in a light, disdainful voice.

He laughed. "It's a complex, I suppose, I could never convince myself that I had outgrown Shanty Town until I came back here and had the seal of approval put upon me by the elite of Bay City, Queer, isn't it?"

She gave him a grudging glance. "That at least needn't worry you any longer."

"I always get what I go after," he said quietly.

"Modest, aren't you?"

"No, just sure of myself. There's a difference."

"Who am I to take exception to your pride in your accomplishments," she inquired bitterly. "You are on your way up, I am on my way out."

He stared at her curiously. "Yes?"

She shrugged her shoulders. "As you may know, a generation ago my family was prominent locally. Now my mother works in a store and so shall I when I finish my course in interior decorating."

He was studying the dead end of his cigarette. "If you're an expert on interior decorating, I might have a job for you."

"A job?"

"Perhaps you aren't interested in jobs."

"Oh, yes," said Janet with a hostile smile. "I'm interested in any chance to earn money. It's so important to make money. Nothing else matters."

"I've bought the old Radcliffe mansion."

"My grandfather's house!"

"I signed the papers a couple of hours ago."

"But," cried Janet breathlessly, "It's dreadfully run down. That's why Mother let the property go, practically for back taxes. We couldn't afford to live there and no one would rent it. People don't care for those huge, old fashioned places any more."

"I do," said Tony. "It's like this he explained. 'When I was a ragged alley rat I promised myself that some day I'd buy the best of everything. At that time the old Radcliffe mansion represented my idea of the most elegant thing of its kind.'"

"It broke Mother's heart to give up the place," said Janet icily. "It's one of the few times I ever saw her cry. Since then I've gone blocks out of my way not to pass the house. It isn't pleasant to be reminded that the glories of your past are past."

"If it would be painful, for get it."

"Don't be ridiculous," said Janet. "Paupers cannot afford sentiment."

"That's settled then? Shall we fix a day to go out and look things over? Tomorrow?"

"If you like."

"I'll pick you up at two at your home."

She gave him a curious glance. "Won't you rattle around like a marble, alone in that huge place?"

He shook his head. "Of course I shan't live there long alone," he said.

She stared. "You're going to be married?"

"Naturally," he said, "one can't select a wife as quickly as a house."

"You haven't selected one yet!" cried Janet in a dismayed voice.

He grinned. "All I know is that she'll have to be out of the top drawer."

Janet decided she hated him. "Locally you'll find Priscilla Leigh our highest priced article," she remarked disdainfully.

"So she's given me to understand," said Tony.

So far as Berenice and Bill were concerned, the party at Lou Fletcher's that same evening was not a success. They ran the radio and danced and made a great deal of noise. The people in the adjoining apartment knocked on the wall, but no one paid any attention. They were a quiet middle aged couple and did not belong to "The Bunch," as Berenice's friends called themselves.

The Sheltons were middle aged too. "But we don't let it get us down!" cried May, shrieking with laughter when Guy draped a tapestry from the wall about his shoulders and pretended to be a bullfighter in action.

Guy was screamingly funny, or so Berenice thought, but Bill sat in the corner and sulked just as she had expected him to do.

She went over to Bill. "Ready to go?"

"What do you think?" he asked. He did not trouble himself to tell the Fletchers he had enjoyed the party, Berenice seethed with anger.

"I hope you're satisfied," she said when they were alone in their own apartment.

Bill stalked into the dressing room and began to hunt for his pajamas. "If I refuse to go to their damned parties, you're sore. If I give in and go, you're sore. It's got so it's hell around here any way you take it."

"If you could manage," cried Berenice in a choked voice, "we'd never have any friends."

Bill let down the in a door bed with an angry thud. "Can't you see that this sort of thing is playing the devil with us?" he asked.

When Bill's voice quivered like that, the hard core of defiance in Berenice's heart gave way. She was never able to resist his tenderness.

"If I weren't crazy about you I wouldn't care what you did," he said unsteadily.

"I know," whispered Berenice. "I had something to tell you when I came home," said Bill, "only you weren't in a receptive humor."

They were sitting on the edge of the bed. He still had a arm about her and Berenice's head was cuddled against his shoulder.

"I don't know why we ever fight," she sighed. "What did you have to tell me?"

"The boss had a talk with me today."

"Oh!" cried Berenice radiantly. "You've got the raise at last. Now we can have a car like every one else."

Bill swallowed hard. "No," he said. "I didn't get a raise. They are cutting salaries again. We'll have to find some way to get by on ten dollars less a week."

She stiffened & drew away from his embrace to stare at him. "You mean we'll have to move? Back to cheap housekeeping rooms without a bath or anything?"

"If you ask me," said Bill in a grim voice, "we were better off there than here, and a darned sight happier."

"When you preach you make me so mad I could die!" cried Berenice in a stifled voice.

"You don't sweeten my disposition any," remarked Bill savagely, snapping off the light.

Driving out to the club in his battered flivver early the next morning, Jim Phillips, after a nearly sleepless night, had arrived at a decision, not a happy one, but one from which he was determined not to swerve. He had made a complete idiot of himself the night before, he did not propose to repeat the performance.

By every standard on which he had painstakingly built his life he could not afford to fall in love with Miss Helen Sanders.

He succeeded so well in convincing himself that Miss Helen Sanders was merely a shooting star which had flashed across his horizon only to disappear, he considered it extremely unlikely that she would keep her promise and appear for the promenade feeling well repaid for the

Nevertheless, knocking golf balls idly against the side of the caddy house, he kept his eyes steadily on the drive leading down to the gates and when the Leighs' scarlet and white coupe turned in at the entrance Jim's heart gave an agonized bound.

AHEM!

Mike Basnicki, former Raymond boy and graduate of the University of Alberta where he was an honor student in Chemistry, has accepted a position with the Manitoba Sugar Co. at Winnipeg. We congratulate Mike on the honors that he has achieved in his studies and the position of Chief Chemist that has now come to him. "He did!"

"The last speaker," said the chairman of the Health Congress, "is a striking example of the efficacy of the doctrines he so eloquently advocates. Hale and hearty at 80 years of age, he could tire out many a man younger than himself."

A voice from the audience. "He did!"

"The STORE with the STOCK"

The extent of propaganda in Germany may be estimated somewhat by the surprise of German prisoners of war at seeing the word Canada on the shoulders of their captors. These men had been told first that Canada was not in the war, and later that the Canadian troop ships had all been torpedoed and sunk. We wonder if such falsehoods are good for the morale of troops? It seems that when they did learn the truth, the knowledge would diminish, rather than increase their courage and determination to win success.

Speakers at the 2nd Ward Sacrament meeting Sunday evening were Miss Wilma Sorensen, who represented the Missionary Class of the Sunday School, Miss Verle Roffson who has been at the B.Y.U. for the winter, Byron Anderson who has been attending the University of Alberta, and Chas. Tillack. Two anthems by the Choir with the Bennett sisters taking the part in one, Mrs. Marion Brown the solo in one song, and Mrs. E. L. Paxman the solo in the other anthem made the special numbers. A very enjoyable meeting was held.

Policeman Murdered

Constable Gordon Counsel of the Lethbridge R.C.M.P. was shot and killed by Charles Hansen, well-to-do farmer of Park land, who then turned the gun on himself with fatal results on Wednesday. Tuesday night Hansen, some time after a quarrel with his oldest son George, forced his other two sons to take him to George's house, where he shot and seriously wounded George. Police were notified, and Hansen refused to surrender and killed Cons. Counsel when the police tried to enter and search the house. He leaves his wife, three sons and three daughters. Temporary insanity is believed the cause of the tragedies.

George Ralph is home now from the Hospital and is getting around again.

Lloyd Loree of Nanton was seriously injured Saturday evening when he stepped off a bus and into the path of a moving car. He was thrown 120 ft. through the air and picked up unconscious and a deep cut in the back of his head. No bones were found to be broken and his condition is reported as satisfactory. He was a member of the Junior Baseball team which had competed in a sports day at High River where they won it comes to that, neither could I.

"How much beer do you drink in a day, my man?" a temperance reformer asked a British worker who had a thirst that was apparently unquenchable. "Oh, a gallon guv'nor—perhaps two," was the reply. "Two gallons?" said the reformer. "Why, I couldn't drink that much water." "Well, guv'nor," said the working man, "if at High River where they won the Junior cup."
